The Primary Care Companion is a peer-reviewed journal that strives to bring together knowledge in medicine and psychiatry to improve patient care. In partnership with the Association of Medicine and Psychiatry, we will accomplish this goal by offering articles of high clinical value that address neuropsychiatric problems presenting in a variety of settings familiar to those in primary care—office-based practices, emergency departments, and collaborative care milieus such as geriatric and med/psych units. Pertinent scholarly reviews, case reviews and conferences, brief reports, and timely commentary will augment original research, including practice-based research from individuals and groups with interest in integrated care models.
