

Hats Off to the Reviewers!

In this era of full disclosure, let me share a secret. It's easy to be an editor. The "heavy lifting" is done by the reviewers.

As I looked over the list of the many ladies and gentlemen who donated their time to review manuscripts for JCP in 1997, I was struck by the incredible pool of talent in this informal "college." Our reviewers come from many disciplines, specialties, and subspecialties. They are practitioners and scientists. What they share is a generous willingness to give freely of themselves.

The product is in the pages of JCP over the past year. Those papers that were accepted had to pass an intensive process of criticism, often undergoing multiple iterations to improve rigor, clarity, and readability.

My profound thanks to each of these esteemed colleagues for making JCP such a useful vehicle to transmit information to clinicians. I wish all of them and all of our readers a happy, healthy, and productive 1998.
